

Abstract of the Disclosure

A router and a routing method for providing linkage with mobile nodes are provided. The router exchanges a packet between a mobile node and correspondent nodes, by performing authentication for purposes of security, binding update, and packet conversion, etc.. The router and the routing method allow the mobile node to directly communicate with correspondent nodes that do not include functions for communicating with the mobile node.